Description

The Texas Army National Guard at Camp Maxey in Powderly, Texas awarded BOXX Modular a $1.2 million contract to provide a barracks facility. The barracks building consisted of sixteen renovated units which provided a total of 13,400 square feet. Use of the renovated building as a barracks facility provided a very cost-effective end product and because of the replacement of finishes, inside and outside, the building appeared to be new in almost every respect.

A new exterior stucco finish was applied on site to match the exterior finish of adjacent buildings at the base. The interior finishes were updated to include new carpet, ceiling finish and wall finishes. The building was installed on a permanent, engineered, poured-in-place concrete foundation. All renovation work was completed on site after the building was setup on the foundation and utilities connected. The installation, including the renovation work, was completed within 65 days of date of award of contract.
